FROM ITALY

WHOLE PEELED TOMATOES

Laila the Italian Brand of Whole Peeled Tomatoes come from San Marzano's fields: they are the result of a perfect mixture of the sun and the land thanks to the presence of the Vesuvio, the famous volcano, which gives birth to a genuine and natural product.

The fresh Italian Whole Plum Tomatoes matured on the sun of the South of Italy are collected with the technique of the manual harvest and they are properly worked by daily process that gives to the tomato the taste and the aroma of the traditional Mediterranean cuisine.

History

The tomato, as it is known, is native of Central America. It was brought in Europe in the 600s and it had just an ornamental value.

Its food value was discovered only later some say not until the eighteenth century when it was spread in different countries of the Mediterranean. Some evidences of oral tradition say that the first tomato seed arrived in Italy in the 1770s, as a gift from the Kingdom of Peru to the Kingdom of Naples.

The tomato gained great appreciation from the gastronomic point of view toward the beginning of the 900s, when the first industries of conservation arose and they started the production of the famous "peeled" tomato, delicious red sauce.

In the recent past the tomato was also called "red gold" for the economic value that was able to take for farmers of the Agro - Nocerino Sarnese.

The Italian tomato is witnessing to a new season of rebirth and is now required not only in Europe and America, but also in other continents where it is spreading thanks to the growing success of the "Mediterranean diet."
